

The Given Proteus Simulation of an electronic voting machine which is designed using digital circuits and ICs.

It consists of 4 counters that gets triggered when push button is clicked once and increases the votes of a particular candidate only.

It also contains a button which when turned on shows the current winning candidate and number of votes of winning candidate.

